1. Strategic and operational Influencing change & better practice

The long-overdue careers strategy has finally been unveiled by the apprenticeships and skills minister, at the Careers Development Institute's annual conference this morning.

This includes £4 million to support every school and college to have a careers leader, and a further £5 million funding to develop 20 careers hubs, which will be led by the Careers and Enterprise Company.

It explains that the National Careers Service will provide specialist advice for adults who need it most, including the long-term unemployed and those with additional needs, and will also have an updated "one-stop shop" website.

Lack of support for impartial careers guidance a disappointment

Written by FE News Editor Published: 05 December 2017 Hits: 1473 Vote 5 Rate

The Career Development Institute welcomes the Government's new careers strategy but is disappointed about the lack of support for impartial careers guidance.

Two years ago the then Secretary of State for Education, Nicky Morgan, acknowledged that the school-based approach to careers guidance was not working effectively for all young people and announced that the Government would be publishing a strategy for improving careers guidance in schools. In January of this year the Government re-stated its intention to publish a comprehensive careers strategy later in the year.

The Minister now responsible for careers, Anne Milton, launched the long awaited strategy yesterday (4 Dec) at the CDI's annual conference in Solihull.

The CDI is pleased to see that the strategy picks up several of the points that we have been recommending. It sets out a 'platform for change' that should lead to significant improvements in careers education and guidance in schools. The strategy endorses fully the eight benchmarks of good practice developed by the Gatsby Foundation and provides funding to extend the current successful pilot in the North East to twenty more areas of the country. This should help us move towards the CDI's goal of funded support across the whole of England.

Keeping your knowledge and skills up to date and constantly learning new ways of working is the hallmark of a professional

If you are going to maximise your potential for lifetime employability, it is essential that you maintain high levels of professional competence by continually upgrading your skills and knowledge.

We recognise that we have a critical role to play in retaining public confidence in careers practitioners and further raising standards of delivery of advice and guidance linked to learning and work. With these aims in mind we provide a well developed annual programme of training and CPD opportunities that are open to members and non-members.

- Traditional one-day themed conferences – eg HE Advisers Conference; Student Conference; Careers Educators Conference
- Skills workshops and training days – eg Practical Career Guidance Skills; Personal Branding – the key to getting that ideal job; Demystifying Career Coaching; Current expectations on schools relating to 14-19 education etc
